

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Scottish Independent News recorded a total revenue of £4.2 million for the fiscal year 2025, representing a 12% increase over the previous year. Digital subscriptions grew by 34%, now accounting for 61% of total revenue. Print circulation declined by 8% year-on-year, consistent with industry trends.

The editorial team published 3,840 articles across all platforms, with an average monthly readership of 1.2 million unique visitors. Investigative journalism accounted for 18% of published content and generated 42% of total reader engagement.

FINANCIAL HIGHLIGHTS

Total Revenue: £4,200,000

Operating Expenses: £3,650,000

Net Profit: £550,000

Digital Ad Revenue: £1,100,000

Subscription Income: £2,560,000

Print Ad Revenue: £540,000

The company maintained a healthy operating margin of 13.1%. Capital expenditure for technology upgrades totalled £320,000, primarily for the new content management system and analytics platform.

EDITORIAL PERFORMANCE

The investigative desk broke three major stories in 2025: the Highland Council procurement scandal, the NHS data privacy breach affecting 40,000 patients, and the offshore tax arrangements of a prominent Edinburgh-based property developer.

Reader trust scores reached an all-time high of 78%, up from 71% in 2024. Complaints upheld by IPSO fell to just two cases, the lowest in the publication's history.

OUTLOOK FOR 2026

Management projects revenue growth of 8-10% in 2026, driven by expansion of the premium subscriber tier and the planned launch of a Gaelic-language digital edition in Q2. Headcount is expected to increase by 6 full-time journalists focusing on data and video content.